Good Evening!

Legal Services of New Jersey is delighted to welcome you tonight. As we complete our 48th year of service to disadvantaged New Jerseyans, Legal Services is pleased to recognize, as we have since 1983, special contributions to advancing justice.

This evening we will first honor extraordinary efforts of many volunteer lawyers from all parts of the state. Their efforts in providing representation to lower-income residents are an important supplement to the daily work of Legal Services staff lawyers.

We then acknowledge the wonderful bipartisan perseverance and strength of the four legislative leaders who spurred the passage—after four challenging years—of the court filing fee increase that will generate $10.1 million annually for Legal Services in New Jersey. This additional funding concededly will not return Legal Services to pre-recession resources and service capacity. (Legal Services funding has dropped from $70 million in 2008—equivalent to $77.2 million today—to just $37 million currently.) Nonetheless, this infusion marks a major turning point, beginning an urgent journey to restore Legal Services' capacity and narrow the legal assistance gap—those living in poverty who need, but cannot secure, the help of attorneys for life-altering legal problems.

Two additional legislators will receive recognition for extraordinary contributions to greater justice over a period of years. We also will highlight two foundations' special charitable support in response to the terrible hardship occasioned by Hurricane Sandy.

Finally, the evening will conclude with a celebration of the lifetime legacy of two extraordinary leaders who made major strides in securing greater justice and a more civil society. In addition to a video commemoration during the evening, their extended interviews will be the first entries in a new web-based video equal justice memorial and archive that will be permanently maintained by Legal Services of New Jersey.

Let these remarkable leaders and contributors inspire us all to bold new action on behalf of greater justice.

The Equal Justice Awards

The annual Legal Services of New Jersey Equal Justice Awards are conferred by decision of the Board of Trustees, after a statewide nominating process. Not all awards are conferred each year. The descriptions of the awards presented in 2014 follow. All prior Equal Justice Award recipients may be found at www.LSNJ.org/awardrecipients.

The Richard J. Hughes Career Public Service Award, named for former New Jersey Governor and Chief Justice Richard J. Hughes, recognizes individuals who—throughout a long period of public service, usually as a public official—have made exceptional contributions toward securing a more just society for disadvantaged people.

The Lipman-Franks Award is named for two esteemed state legislators who played especially central roles in developing early financial support for Legal Services and in securing greater and more equal justice for the disadvantaged.

Equal Justice Medals were first awarded in 1983. They recognize and celebrate the efforts of individuals and organizations that have made outstanding contributions to securing greater justice for disadvantaged people, especially through legal processes and the judicial system. The medals focus attention on those who strive for a more just society.

The Thomas H. Kean Award for Leadership in the Advancement of Racial and Economic Justice and Civil Society, newly established in 2014, commemorates extraordinary career and lifetime achievements in advancing racial and economic justice and a more civil society.

More Concerning Our Honorees

Thomas H. Kean served as the 48th governor of New Jersey from 1982 to 1990, and subsequently went on to become the 10th president of Drew University. He later achieved global recognition as chairman of the 9/11 Commission investigating the causes of the 2001 terrorist attack. He is often cited in the media as the most popular governor in New Jersey's history. In 1988 he authored The Politics of Inclusion, in which he wrote "I have tried to show... that responsible government can meet people's needs and bring them together, that government can make a difference in the way we live." His career reveals a continuing commitment to both speech and action designed to secure racial justice, overcome economic disadvantage, and promote humane and fair resolution of social discord.

James H. Coleman, Jr., the son of a sharecropper who was raised within the confines of segregation in the south, in 1994 became the first African American to be appointed to the New Jersey Supreme Court, sitting as an associate justice until 2003. Earlier as an Appellate Division judge in 1985, he wrote the crucial decision that declared unconstitutional the then-practice by prosecutors of eliminating potential jurors because of their race. He has served as chairman of the Legal Services of New Jersey board, and today is Of Counsel at Porzio, Bromberg & Newman.

Stephen M. Sweeney, a member of the New Jersey Senate since 2002, has served as president of the upper house since 2010, and earlier was the majority leader there. The former director of the Gloucester County Board of Chosen Freeholders, he has been a major force in protecting the rights of workers, children with disabilities, and other people facing disadvantage. He led this year's legislative push to secure increased Legal Services appropriations through court filing fee increases.

Vincent Prieto, now in his first year as speaker of the New Jersey Assembly, has served in the lower house since 2004—his first elective office. The Cuban-born lawmaker, who also serves as code official for Secaucus, has been in the forefront in advancing legislation protecting consumers with utility purchases, as well as sponsoring various public safety measures. His personal leadership was of critical importance in securing final Assembly passage of the filing fee legislation.

Thomas H. Kean, Jr., the minority leader of the New Jersey Senate for the past seven years, has been a member of the upper house since 2003. He previously served in the state Assembly for 20 months. His legislative accomplishments have included environmental protection efforts, safeguards for the state's unemployment fund, and measures eliminating smoking in workplaces and public venues. His caucus provided important support for the year's filing fee legislation.

Jon M. Bramnick, minority leader of the New Jersey Assembly for the past three years, has served in the upper house since 2003, and earlier on the Plainfield City Council for eight years. Over the years, he has been an adjunct professor at Rutgers and Rider, and is often cited in the media for his stand-up comedy performances at charity fundraisers. Through his leadership, the Assembly's Republican caucus provided the critical votes necessary for final passage of the filing fee legislation.

Loretta Weinberg, the majority leader of the New Jersey Senate, joined the upper house in 2005 after serving a dozen years in the state Assembly. Throughout her career she has been a steadfast and courageous advocate to improve the lives of all disadvantaged people, with a particular focus on women and those facing disabilities. She has long been a strong supporter of the state's Legal Services program.

Peter J. Barnes, III, now in his first year as a member of the New Jersey Senate, served for seven years in the state Assembly and many years as a member and president of the Edison Township Council and numerous other positions in local government. He has focused much of his legislative career on environmental, zoning and public safety issues, and has been one of the legislature's most ardent supporters for additional funding for Legal Services of New Jersey.

Northeast New Jersey Legal Services (NNJLS)

James Banks. Since 2009, Mr. Banks has conducted over 40 expungement clinics in Passaic, Bergen, and Hudson counties and handled over 35 individual expungement and bankruptcy pro bono cases, contributing over 250 hours to NNJLS clients. Mr. Banks has advised over 80 low-income individuals in the expungement process through the extensive clinics he facilitates and has taken on more than 35 individual expungement or bankruptcy cases.

Central Jersey Legal Services (CJLS)

Robert E. Lytle has been accepting cases from CJLS' Trenton office for over 10 years specializing in expungements. In the last three years alone, he has accepted 10 such cases. As a Trustee of the Mercer County Bar Association, Mr. Lytle has also been instrumental in stimulating the Bar's continued involvement in the Volunteer Lawyers Project and its overall support of the work of CJLS.

Jose D. Roman. A trial attorney with practices in New York and New Jersey, Mr. Roman has accepted pro bono referrals from CJLS, particularly in tort case defenses, since 2011. One such matter consumed 44 hours before it was dismissed.

Mark B. Watson has been taking pro bono referrals from CJLS since 2007. He concentrates on expungements, typically taking five to six referrals at one time.

Legal Services of Northwest Jersey (LSNWJ)

Henry L. Kent-Smith and Irina B. Elgart. Three years ago, the Township of Allamuchy in Warren County advised tenants residing in its low-income housing that their rent would be raised to market rent and if they could not afford the new rent that they must vacate their units. A number of the tenants turned to LSNWJ for help. Henry L. Kent-Smith and Irina B. Elgart of the Princeton office of Fox Rothschild, LLP joined LSNWJ as co-counsel. Mr. Kent-Smith guided the litigation and negotiations, while Ms. Elgart handled the day-to-day work on the cases. The case was recently settled with the units being preserved as affordable housing units until the year 2037, along with damages. Fox Rothschild waived its claim for attorneys' fee, resulting in the entire fee being awarded to LSNWJ.

Lori F. Hirsch, corporate counsel at Merck, Sharp & Dohme, has been a volunteer attorney in LSNWJ's tenancy project for eight years, assisting low-income tenants facing eviction, and preventing eviction and homelessness for scores of families. She typically represents tenancy clients at 8 to 10 court dates annually. As pro bono coordinator for the Whitehouse Station campus of Merck, she brought in new volunteer attorneys and legal assistants from the law firm of Reed Smith and the general counsel's office of the Chubb Group, quadrupling the number of low-income tenants receiving legal assistance.

South Jersey Legal Services (SJLS)

David C. Epler. Since 2011, Mr. Epler has accepted 22 divorce cases for pro bono representation. Mr. Epler is especially valuable to SJLS because whenever he finishes a case and sends the final judgment of divorce, he always asks that another case be sent. There is never a time when he does not have at least two pro bono cases.

Edward J. Paul has volunteered with SJLS for years. Since 2011, Mr. Paul has accepted 15 bankruptcy cases for pro bono representation through the Pro Bono Bankruptcy Project, a joint project among SJLS, the local bankruptcy bench and bar and Rutgers School of Law–Camden.

Legal Services of New Jersey (LSNJ)

Joseph Albanese is a sole practitioner with an office in Forked River, accepting bankruptcy, consumer and foreclosure matters. His cases have involved emergency Chapter 13s, loan modifications and multiple statutory defenses. He is one of a small group of pro bono attorneys handling Chapter 13s, often in conjunction with foreclosures. Among his cases was a foreclosure TILA avoidance action in which he was successful in his cross motion for summary judgment, and which resulted in a reported decision by the Bankruptcy court (Judge Lyons). That case took several years to resolve.

Daniel Frischberg was a sole practitioner who has recently become Of Counsel to the Wismur law firm in Marlton. He takes difficult bankruptcy and consumer cases, and is a trainer for LSNJ consumer courses. In addition to representing LSNJ referrals, Mr. Frischberg also accepts cases from South Jersey Legal Services. He is currently the “Attorney of the Month” on LSNJ’s PROBONONJ website.

John C. Shamy, a sole practitioner in Somerset, has accepted pro bono cases since 1997, including bankruptcy, domestic violence, and expungement matters, frequently handling more than one referral at a time. He also mentors new and inexperienced attorneys in handling bankruptcy and domestic violence cases. In recent years he has averaged seven or more pro bono matters annually, and has also taken cases from LSNWJ. When cases are circulated to the LSNJ pro bono panel he rarely fails to take at least one, often when he is also currently representing another pro bono client.

Firms

Ciardi Ciardi & Astin firm attorneys have volunteered with SJLS for the past five years. Since 2011, Ciardi Ciardi & Astin attorneys have accepted 36 bankruptcy cases for pro bono representation. After handling one bankruptcy for a veteran, Mr. Ciardi collaborated with Daniel Astin and Colonel Frank Ryan to found the Military Assistance Project, a nonprofit organization which provides direct and free legal services for active duty, reserve, or veteran military personnel in the form of pro bono bankruptcy services. Ciardi Ciardi & Astin continues to take cases from SJLS.

Trenk, DePasquale, Della Fera & Sodono. Beginning in 2008, there were two name partners and one associate enrolled with LSNJ and cases were referred out to them. In 2013, three additional associates enrolled, and three more joined in 2014. All nine have taken cases. A video portrait of Sam Della Fera, Jr. is on LSNJ's pro bono website. Another of the partners, Anthony Sodano, III, previously received an individual pro bono award. The firm has created a culture of pro bono. In a firm of 26 attorneys, more than a third have taken and continue to take cases from LSNJ.

In-House Volunteers

Ferdinand Fernandez. Since 2013, Mr. Fernandez has contributed 1,400 hours in pro bono work as an In-House volunteer attorney at Northeast New Jersey Legal Services, and has taken 72 cases. He comes to the office five days a week, occasionally even Saturdays. Mr. Fernandez has handled cases in several areas of law, including custody and child support, housing, public benefits, domestic violence, taxes, and SSI.

Vishnu Khemraj. Since 2012, Vishnu has contributed 1,949 pro bono hours at Northeast New Jersey Legal Services (NNJLS). In addition to managing his own private practice, he serves as an In-House volunteer attorney at NNJLS four to five times a week. Mr. Khemraj has helped 185 clients during his time at NNJLS in the areas of immigration, family, and housing, and has also given more than 15 clinics in the areas of naturalization and divorce.

Becky J. Liken has been a consistent volunteer at Legal Services of New Jersey since 2010, contributing more than 1,800 hours. She began at LSNJ on the statewide legal hotline. She moved on to LSNJ's Senior Citizen Legal Rights project, where she assisted on an amicus case before the New Jersey Supreme Court, as well as assisting individual clients. Recently, Ms. Liken turned her commitment and dedication to LSNJ's SSI Project, where she supports clients during the Social Security claim process through comprehensive interviews, merit assessments and other support.

Dorothy Razawich, an experienced attorney, worked for many years in Legal Services, and has volunteered with ENLS since early 2011. She works approximately 10 to 12 hours per week. She was doing elder law, bankruptcy, and consumer defense work until January 2013, when she switched to the ENLS housing unit. Since that time, she has been handling intake and going to court on those matters. During her tenure as a volunteer, she has handled over 250 cases.

Charitable Foundations

Robin Hood Foundation. Immediately after Hurricane Sandy, the New York City based Robin Hood Foundation stepped into provide tens of millions of dollars to a wide array of disaster relief services in New York and New Jersey. This support included funding Legal Services of New Jersey and two regional Legal Services programs to provide civil legal assistance to Sandy victims. That assistance continued through this September, and amounted to more than one million dollars. Robin Hood also assisted two smaller legal aid providers.

Hurricane Sandy New Jersey Relief Foundation. Formed shortly after Hurricane Sandy under the leadership of New Jersey First Lady Mary Pat Christie, Hurricane Sandy New Jersey Relief Fund provided tens of millions of dollars in disaster relief aid to New Jersey Sandy victims. Included in this assistance have been grants to Legal Services of New Jersey and another smaller legal assistance provider to provide important legal assistance to victims.
